

Volkswagen Up! EV

Tuesday, 19 May 2009

Everyone is churning out their electric vehicles after President Obama urged automakers to build vehicles that are more fuel efficient. Of course, Volkswagen has in fact made plans to showcase their eco-friendly concept cars at the Frankfurt Motor Show this coming September.

Based on the sketches produced by Volkswagen engineers, I can say that it's a rather interesting concept car – provided that if it reached the production line, that it. It's a 2-door vehicle and I speculate that it can run a couple of hundred miles before you need to refill the batteries.

Will this be Volkswagen's future EV call UP!?