
2010 Mercedes-Benz E-Class Coupe

Wednesday, 20 May 2009

Mercedes-Benz has redesigned their E-Class Coupe into an entirely new machine for 2010 – or did they just changed some of the parts and stamp an E-Class logo on it? Nevertheless, the new E-Class has shed close to 400 pounds in weight thanks to the underpinned C-Class platform.

According to the Mercedes spokesperson, the new E-Class architecture is designed to give the car improved performance characteristics. It seems that the E250 diesel engine can deliver as much as 36 percent better power and it even consumes 17 percent lesser fuel.

Of course, the 2010 E-Class Coupe will be available for purchase with a price tag of $48,050.

Here are some photos of the 2010 Mercedes-Benz E-Class Coupe: